Library Lending Pots?

Lansing residents like Roseann Bonin will practically be able to check out pots and pans like they check out books at the Lansing Public Library. Or maybe they should just bring their own to a special "Look" on Wednesday.

27 Chief 'Look Books'

LANSING—Television cooking expert Julia Childs wouldn't be present, but there will be enough on cooking to interest culinary enthusiasts.

The event, a first for the Lansing Public Library, is the "Cookbook Look"—scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday in the main room of the library.

Residents are invited to preview a new series of cook books developed by Time-Life Books. The series is written by famous authors and includes 27 cook books featuring various countries' recipes.

Included in the series are books on Chinese and Russian cooking; American cooking, Creole-Arcadian style; Latin American and Caribbean Island specialties; and one entitled, "A Quintet of Cuisines," featuring Alpine, Turkish, Polish and North African recipes.

THE LATIN AMERICAN cook book has an unusual recipe for Thanksgiving—turkey in chocolate and chili sauce.

Mrs. Jensen said the books not only contain recipes but are beautifully illustrated and contain a history and customs of each country.

She decided to schedule "Cookbook Look" since so many people enjoy cooking and she thought they would enjoy seeing the series together before they individually go out on loan.

Those attending Wednesday are asked to bring their favorite recipes, which will be duplicated on the library's copy machine for a recipe exchange.

Mrs. Jensen and her staff plan to wear long dresses and serve punch and tidbits. The library, too, will be dressed up for the event—tables covered with red-checkered tablecloths, center pieces of live red geraniums, and arrangements of raw pasta.
